Chasing a Railway Train.

One of those ridiculous and laughable incidents to be seen at the Union Depot occasionally, occurred yesterday afternoon. A countryman, with his pants in his boot tops, an umbrella under his arm, a broad-brimmed straw hat on his head, and the indispensable linen duster covering his frame, arrived on the New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio train, with the intention, as was subsequently developed, of going north via the Buffalo, Pittsburg and Western Railroad. He put in the time intervening between the arrival and departure of the trains, which was half an hour, in digesting the time-tables posted up in the waiting room, and not until his train began to move out did he make any preparation to get aboard. Instantly his hair stood on end and his face assumed the look of a man who had sold "short" yesterday morning. He rushed like a cyclone to the ticket office to procure the necessary pasteboard, passport, and by the time he got and looked for his train it was disappearing around the car shops at the upper end of the city.

With a look of desperate determination in his eye he seized his hat in one hand, his cotton sunshad-der in the other and lit out. Such strides mortal man never made before. In ten seconds he was tearing past the barrel works like a whirlwind and gaining on the train at every flop of his understandings.
But in this case, as it always has been, steam power gained the mastery, and the train soon left the panting granger far in the rear.
Ten minutes later a perspiring, dejected-looking duster, with a hat and umbrella clinging to it, entered the depot and wilted down into a seat, and from the inmost recesses of the flimsy outer garment came the cheery remark:

"Wal, I cal'klate I made her hump her boots to git out'n my way anyhow."—Old City Derrick.

Our patent bed-spring has been remodeled. The one for two-in-a-bed is so arranged that the part the wife lies on can be set by the husband, unknown to the former, and it springs her out of bed and stands her up on the floor at any hour for which it is set. It then remains turned up on one edge, so she can't get back again, at least on her side of the bed; and she won't come back on his side, for she's affixed mad to come near him. So the result is she is compelled to dress and go down stairs to see to breakfast, and the old man will get a rest. Oh, it's a daisy!
